Plan Expand Rural Driver Education

Plans to expand the driver education movement intensively in the nation's rural areas, where it is weakest because many small school districts feel they cannot afford courses in safe driving in their high schools, are under way following the 11th annual driver education breakfast conference which featured the insurance industry's participation in the recent National Safety Congress at Chicago.

The conference, sponsored jointly by the accident prevention department of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies and New York University's Center for Safety Education, which was founded and is largely supported by the Association, marked the twentieth anniversary of the driver education movement. It was highlighted by reports of two states which have begun to solve the cost problem in rural sections by introducing a cooperative "circulating course" in driver education in order to make it available to students in several adjoining counties or school districts.

Driver education administrators of 31 states who attended the breakfast forum were offered this cost-saving plan as one means of providing training in safe driving in thousands of "little red high schools" comprising most of the 57 percent of the nation's 20,034 secondary schools which still do not offer such courses.

Future progress of the driver education movement depends largely upon consolidation of effort in rural areas by neighboring counties; school districts or high schools, the conference was told. Several speakers emphasized that the important factor of cost has held back the establishment of safe driving courses in the curriculum of most rural high schools. But when two or three schools, or as many as five, share the expense of starting a course that rotates among the cooperating schools, they said, training in safe driving can be afforded by any rural community, no matter how small.

The new trend of sharing costs of driver education courses in order to make it available to more students in country districts was reported by Pennsylvania and Iowa. Ivan Stenman, Pennsylvania's state supervisor of driver education, told more than 100 state educational and police and highway patrol officials participating in the forum on the problem that several counties in that state had begun to share costs of providing teachers, materials, training vehicles and other items in order to place the program with in reach of students and community pocketbooks. In Iowa, according to Bert L. Woodcock head of the department of driver education at Iowa State Teachers College, there are numerous instances where two or three schools or school districts have worked out the problem in this way.

Dr. Herbert J. Stack, director of NYU's Center for Safety Education, who was honored at the Safety Congress at a National Safety Council reception for the completion of 25 years in highway safety and driver education work, pointed out the urgent need for expansion in rural areas in describing the present state of the driver education movement. He said the present chances of high schools in some states adding driver education courses are about one in ten, unless drastic methods are used to expand the movement to reach the remaining 46 percent of the eligible students who do not get training in safe driving.

Dr. Stack, who has been identified with driver education since its earliest beginnings in the nineteen thirties, said "Skills of the Road" courses in 19 high schools in Bergen County, N. J., were among the very first in the nation.

FIVE TOWN TEACHERS CLUB HEARS N. E. A. SECRETARY

The Five Town Teachers Club met at the Crescent Park School Monday evening. The president, Mrs. Frances Gunther, reported that $20 has been sent to Korean teachers. The following nominating committee was appointed to report at the next meeting: Mrs. Ruth Hastings, Mrs. Marion Coolidge, and Mrs. Floribel Halnes.

Following the business meeting a musical program was presented with Dawn and Donald Christie playing piano selections and Sonja Swinton playing accordion solos. John Storie, N. E. field secretary of the N. E. A., was the speaker and gave an instructive talk on benefits derived from joining the N. E. A. The next meeting will be Dec. 7. and teach safe driving to students. After slow early growth through the late thirties and the World War II period, he said, the movement experienced rapid expansion under the National Driver Education Program sponsored by the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies. By 1953, total registration in driver education courses had grown to 788,981 students in 8,653 U. S. public high schools. Dr. Stack pointed out, but the movement faces a real challenge in reaching the 57 percent of high schools which are not now offering the courses. Concentration on rural areas will help solve that problem, he declared.

MRS. GEORGE HAMMOND

Mrs. Emma E. Hammond died at her home at Skillington Saturday night after being in ill health for several years.

She is survived by her husband, George, of Bethel.

Funeral services were held at the Greenleaf funeral home, Tuesday forenoon. Rev. Charles Pendleton officiated. Interment was at Rutland cemetery, Rutland, Mass.

The small community where this kind and sincere woman lived will miss her. Her was a nature of courage and determination. The handicap of falling vision, poor health and slight deafness did not daunt her. She did her housework, tended her window plants and met her friends and neighbors with a brave smile.

In earlier years she shared the joy with her husband of making a large and well-kept garden. Their early vegetables were always on the tables of their neighbors as soon as on their own and one of her happiest moments was when she placed a box of prime vegetables bearing berries of a basket of fresh eggs in the hands of a chance visitor. She was a kind and generous woman.

Her devoted and now lonely husband and friends try hard to remember that death brought release from suffering and helplessness. She has stepped up to glory and peace and a life that is eternal.

About 275 Oxford county people attended the annual meeting, which began with a supper served by the South Paris high school seniors at the Congregational Church. Featured speaker was Mrs. Dorothy Clarke Wilson, of Orono, noted author and lecturer, who showed colored slides and discussed life in India "Behind the Mud Curtain." She visited Pandit Nehru, statesman and author, and described and illustrated her visit with him.

India's agriculture is quite primitive, she said, with the wooden plow and water buffalo or ox the method of tilling the soil. Manure is not returned to the soil but is made into dung cakes for fuel, further adding to the problem of soil depletion.

She described the areas of Madras and Hyderabad State as the areas in which communism is making the most headway in India. She urged that we expand our program of extending technical knowledge, friendship, and brotherhood to India rather than pushing our commercial products upon them.

Membership in the Oxford County Extension Association reached 1,445 at the annual meeting, including 881 men and 564 women. Membership is still open to those forwarding their dues to the local Extension solicitors or to the Extension Association office in South Paris. The "potato diggers" led by Mrs. Florence Hastings, of Bethel, won out over the "cow hands," explained by Warren Abbott, of Rumford, by 51 in the membership contest.

Winning the top award in the Square Meals for Health program was the Denmark women's extension group, announced Mrs. Ada Wadsworth, of Hiram county Extension foods project leader. Winning blue ribbons for scores above 90 were Mexico, Dixfield, East Bethel, Hiram, Andover, Canton Point, North Rumford, and North Newry. Gordon Richardson, of Denmark. Ernest Maberry, member of the Hungry Hollow Hike Hike 4-H Club, of South Paris, presented a 4-H club demonstration on "Bolt Conservation."

Richard Fox, of North Fryeburg, winner of the 1953 Maine Great Pastures Contest and third in New England, described his Green Pastures program and his visit to the Eastern State Exposition in September. Continued on Page Eight

More Land in State Closed To Hunting

Chief Warden Elmer Ingraham of the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Game says that reports coming in from wardens throughout the State indicate that the posting of land against hunting is still on the increase.

Ingraham attributed the posting to reaction by the farmers and landowners against the small minority among the hunting fraternity who consistently violate the standards of good behavior in the field.

Gang hunting in small areas was listed by the Warden Chief as one of the major annoyances most land owners objected to, and he felt that it undoubtedly has been responsible for the closing of many lands to all sportsmen, not just the gang hunters.

A new law passed at the last session of the Legislature restricts the number of people hunting as a group to eight persons, but Ingraham stated that there are many small woodlots and farming areas where even eight would be far too many.

Shooting too close to buildings, destruction of fences, wounding or killing of livestock, were also given as practices which have played a part in producing the rash of "No Hunting" signs on the State's rural and forest lands.

Unless the hunters of the State are willing to cooperate with the landowners and make an effort to improve the sportsman-landowner relationship, it may be difficult to find land open to public hunting through the central and southern sections within the next few years, according to the Chief Warden.

Giving Capitalism Youth Appeal

The cloak-and-dagger aspects of Communism and the glittering but false promises of Socialism make fascinating subjects for high school and college classroom discussions. On the other hand, the bare facts of capitalism or the American economic system usually are not as interestingly presented. Imagination and experimentation are needed in our schools if we are to bring to life for youngsters the truly exciting facts about our American economic system.

At the Harding College Freedom Forum last week a high school social science teacher and a personal relations director of a lumber company in Warren, Arkansas, told how they had worked together to make the facts about American capitalism a fascinating high school subject. They were Marion Hickingbottom, of the Warren High School faculty, and William Craven, personnel director for Southern Lumber Company. Hickingbottom is a Harding College graduate. Craven attended a Harding Freedom Forum 16 months ago last year. They got together in some community Americanism work and in time got to discussing Hickingbottom's "Problems in Democracy" course for high school seniors.

Appeal Missing
"One of the weakest parts of the course," Hickingbottom told our Freedom Forum conference from 25 states, "was the presentation of Capitalism. Communism and Communism facilitated the youngsters, although I was exposing the evil nature of the intrigue and the miserable economic results of the mismanagement of Communism. But when we got to Capitalism something was missing. We had the cold hard facts but the fascination for youth wasn't there."

Hill Craven came up with an idea. Why not use his company as a laboratory of capitalism, take the high school seniors to it and let them study it in action, its systems of doing business, its problems, its benefits to the employees and owners, and its social growth to the community. Hickingbottom went to the local school board and Craven to the company's management for permission to conduct the experiment. Permission was granted.

At The Plant
For two weeks the high school "Problems in Democracy" class spent two periods per day at Southern Lumber Company. They saw a graphic presentation of the history of the lumber industry; how in days gone by it was a cut-and-get-out operation; but how in recent years, the lumber people had discovered how to grow trees as a crop and make lumbering a stable and permanent industry. They visited the sawmill and planer mills, the sales offices and by-products operations. They went into the pine woods and saw scientific forestry being practiced.

Then Hickingbottom and Craven took them into the plant's personnel training rooms and "asked" the company to the students for $2,500,000, issuing 25,000 shares of stock. A "president," "vice-president," "treasurer" and two other "directors" were appointed. Hill Craven acted as their company manager. He placed $250,000 in simulated currency on the directors' table and told the "owners" this was their profit for one year. Everybody wanted to declare a dividend at once!

Good Results
Hill Craven described a debanking machine which the company needed. He told the "owners" it would cost $250,000 to purchase it and operate it for one year, but that it would permit sale of bar chips which currently were being burned as waste. It was a graphic business problem. The high school seniors were brought directly to grips with the pros and cons of the investment, the natural tendency toward despoiling difficulties, the factors of business losses, prices and wages, sales competition, depreciation, inflation and all the other problems confronting American business. They had fun learn-

DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

HERBERT E. HORTON, 102 Main Street, Federalburg, Maryland, says he believes he was a natural born "worry wart." When he started to school he lived in continual fear of what the other children thought of him. He felt they would criticize his clothes, the way he combed his hair and his every action and remark. During his second year in school he felt his whole life was being ruined when he learned that he must wear glasses. He knew he would be called a sissy, "four eyes," and all the horrible names that a boy wearing glasses could be called. On every possible occasion when he was not actually reading he chucked his glasses away in his desk.

As the years progressed he developed his worry and fear habits. If he had nothing to worry about that worried him.

After he finished school and entered the "real" business world he felt each and every job he performed was probably wrong and he worried about what would happen if he should make a serious mistake. Each morning when he went to work he was sure he would be criticized for some error, or even fired.

These fears and worries haunted him after working hours and at night until it ended in a nervous frustration. He lost weight and became almost a nervous wreck. Numerous physical examinations proved nothing was wrong with him. He had his tonsils removed in hope that they were the cause of his troubles. None of these medical aids seemed to solve his problems.

Then, there being nothing else left, he did a little self-analyzing and decided that fear and worry were the chief troubles and that most of his fears and worries were something that never happened. He had read a statement: "If you're worrying about something that you can do something about, do it! But if you are worrying about something that you can do nothing about, why worry!"

He tried applying this philosophy and it did wonders for his health and happiness.

Economic Highlights

happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

There was a time when it was almost universally believed that the stock exchange was the exclusive province of rich financiers or daring speculators—and when the people concerned with operating the exchange did little or nothing to discourage such a belief. That time belongs to history. A revealing article in Collier's for October 16, written by Donald L. Rogers, helps to show how great a change in attitude is taking place.

Mr. Rogers' article is entitled, "How to Be a Wall Street Financier on $10 a Week," and that pretty well describes its theme. It begins, "One day soon a man may knock at your door and offer you a chance to become a capitalist for $10 down and $10 a week. He won't be peddling panaceas. He'll offer no plan for retirement on a tropical lake, no guarantee of security for your old age. But he'll hold out something perhaps more important and more exciting — a chance to share the profits, to buy into the ownership of America's industries with small cash payments. He'll be selling stocks on a pay-as-you-go plan."

This, Mr. Rogers writes, is the revolutionary concept of the man who became president of the New

WASHINGTON observers are still talking about the surprising victory of the Democratic candidate in Wisconsin's ninth district. It was the first time in history that a Democrat has been elected to congress from that district.

Much of the comment is centered on the fact that the winner, Lester H. Johnson, denounced the administration's farm policy during his campaign. The district is predominantly rural.

It would seem, these Washington sages are saying, that the farmers are disappointed in the administration's farm program and have expressed themselves at the ballot box. They add that the administration must change its policy, and possibly the Secretary of Agriculture, Benson, or find more displeasure registered at the polls next year.

Even Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall admitted that the Wisconsin defeat was "not good." However, he discounted any national trend toward the Democrats. He said the administration still has the "support" of the country.

On the other hand, Democratic leaders were happy over the outcome and saw it as a national trend. Some went so far as to say it indicated a Democratic victory in the 1954 congressional elections.

Senator Kefauver of Tennessee, who campaigned for the winner, said the election showed "a general dissatisfaction with the farm, power, and money policies of the administration."

"For a time," Hill Craven told our Freedom audience, "these youngsters became a part of the American business system, an element in capitalism — they became capitalists." Quota then were given. Results then were given. Results showed the class scored 80 per cent above the national average for high school seniors in "understanding Capitalism."

The LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

That land of grand scenery — Colorado — with its Pike's Peak, clear and clean air, can boast of more than just being nicknamed the "Switzerland of America." Colorado has a U. S. Senator who knows that a straight line is the shortest distance between 2 points — who knows — that detouring around, hunting another obscure route, is donating your time and delaying your trip.

This Colorado Senator says, "We can balance the budget by not spending so much money." In the domes of this nation you will be mostly likely to find contentment and happiness in the ones that "cut their frock to match their cloth." Our Govt. has been weaned from such honest thinking and doing. I hand the palm to this Colorado Senator — Senator Millikin — and the folks who elected him.

On every hand — and with one eye shut — we see fuddled Govt. spending. We pry and fuss around into the world's eating habits and find Ireland eats the heaviest. We pay the expenses, our paper says, of lecturers from every Tom, Dick and Harry country who choose to come and eat as they spread across the land their fool theories of Govt. We pour U. S. dollars — tax exempt — into projects and giant power machinery from Virginia to California. Like the gent walking in the soft and fresh snow — he slipped back 2 steps for every step forward. That's us. This man from Colorado has put his finger on our sore spot — too much fool spending.

Yours with the low down,

at the preservation of the capitalist system. Mr. Funston once said in a speech, "There's no stock exchange in Moscow." And he was immensely encouraged by the fact that a leading labor newspaper took up this theme in an editorial, observing that, "Your right and privilege to become an owner of American business, if you so choose, is one of those precious rights you enjoy and take for granted," and that hundreds of other papers expressed similar ideas.

Wall Street is by far the most important source of the money industry needs for expansion and other improvements. Mr. Funston has said, "Unless Wall Street is restored to health, there will be no place where American corporations can raise new money, no place to cultivate the expansion of American industry." It doesn't take much imagination to visualize what would happen if our industries couldn't expand, or if new ones couldn't come along.

Mr. Rogers describes what is now being done to teach the facts of capitalism to Americans. He concludes, "Funston is proud that 1200 tourists a day visit the stock exchange. They're more than visitors, Funston believes. They're future investors."

GRASS ROOTS OPINION
Pawhuska, Okla., News: "No where in the world do the people and the press enjoy so much freedom and have so many privileges as in the United States. Much of the freedom that we have, and should hold dear, is due to our newspapers. For, as the great political philosopher, Thomas Jefferson said, 'Our liberty depends on the freedom of the Press, and that cannot be limited without being lost.'"

Albany, Ore., Democrat-Herald: "Only when all interests are willing to permit a retreat from paternalism can normal governmental functions and expenditures be restored and the economy be insured."

Washington, D. C., Labor: "Each year, from the depths of the depression to the present time, debt and prosperity rose step by step together. Is increasing public and private debt the only way, and a permanent way, to dodge another depression?"

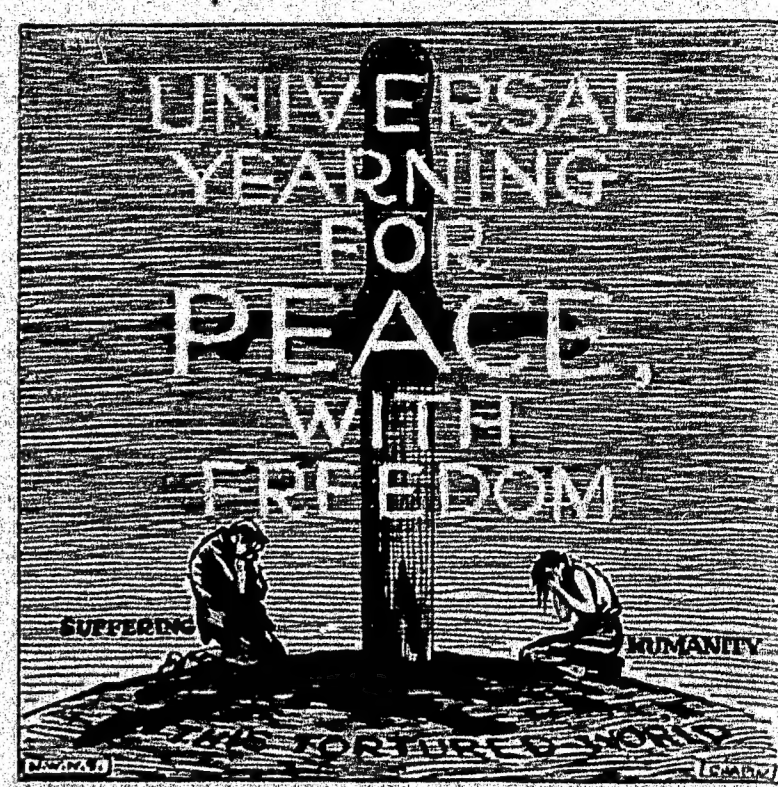

Carlsbad, N. M., Current-Argus: "Farmers who adapt sound soil conservation measures are building the soil, not only for themselves and their children, but for the future of the country."

Woodlake, Calif., Echo: "Our great dangers today are that we shall either fail to be alert to protect the freedoms guaranteed us by the Constitution, or that we shall become so overzealous in the defense of them that we shall abuse and persecute those who disagree with us."

Overbrook, Kan., Citizen: "Just remember, as you encourage government to compete with the other guy, you encourage it to compete with you. Federal government should be taken clear out of all business enterprises — must be taken out for such is foreign to the American way of life, part and parcel with communistic belief."

They who delight to be flattered, pay for their folly by a late repentance.

ARMISTICE DAY

Q—Will House seats have to be reapportioned if Hawaii is admitted to the Union?

A—No. The House-approved standard measure provides that Hawaii's representation in the House (one or two seats, depending on the final form of the bill) be added to the 435 total membership until after the reapportionment due as a result of the 1960 census. House membership has been stabilized at 435 ever since 1910. It was 65 in 1787. By 1900, it had increased to 301.

Q—I've noticed that Chairman Harold H. Velde (R. Ill.), of the House Un-American Activities Committee, is a former FBI agent. Are there any other Members who are former agents?

A—According to the Society of Former Agents of the FBI, there are four others: Reps. Omar Burleson (D. Tex.), Thomas J. Dodd (D. Conn.), Ed Edmondson (D. Okla.) and Allan Oakley Hunter (R. Calif.). No present member of the Senate has had FBI experience, but two governors have. They are Govs. Frank Clement (D. Tenn.) and Edwin Mechem (R. N.M.).

Q—I've heard a lot about lobbying by organized pressure groups. How can an ordinary citizen have his views on legislation considered by Congress?

A—In at least two ways. He can testify, in person, or submit a statement to Congressional committees. Also, a Member of either chamber may file a petition from an individual asking that Congress act or refrain from action on legislation. Petitions are referred to the appropriate committee for consideration, and are printed in a special section of the Congressional Record.

Q—Why is the building in which Congress meets called "Capitol" while the District of Columbia is called the "Capitol?"

A—"Capitol" is from the Latin capitolis, derived from caput, meaning head. From this primary meaning, it came to denote chief, or principal city. "Capitol," although also derived from caput, originally meant the temple of Jupiter, on the Mons Capitolinus in Rome, where the Senate met.

Q—As Chief Justice, is Earl Warren getting a raise over his salary as governor of California?

A—Yes, $500-a-year. As Chief Justice, Warren will get $23,500 (As associate Justices are paid $25,000). In terms of over-all benefits, however, he will probably take a cut. As governor, he lived rent-free in the executive mansion in Sacramento and was allowed $12,000 in servants' salaries, plus a $7,500 expense account. He was granted a per diem travel allowance of $16-a-day while in California and $18-a-day while outside the state. The California National Guard provided him with a personal plane, and two limousines—in Sacramento and Los Angeles—were made available to him by the state. Under terms of a pending Senate bill the salary of the Chief Justice would be raised to $40,000. Warren will receive a $10,000-a-year pension from the state of California beginning March 19, 1954.

Q—Will Oregon's former Republican and now Independent Senator, Wayne Morse, become a Democrat?

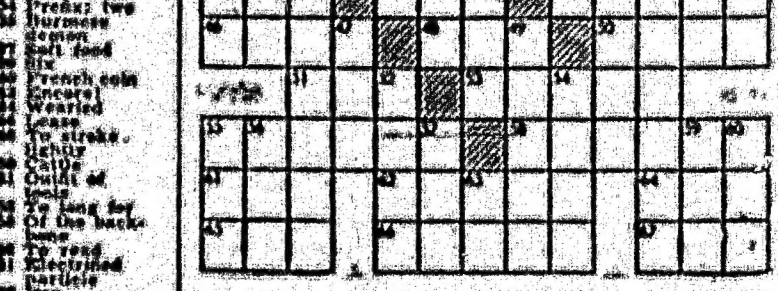

A—Morse announced Sept. 28 he would vote with the Democrats to organize the Senate in the 84th Congress if the 1954 elections result in an evenly divided Senate. He has said he will campaign for the Democrats in 1954.

Q—How much money was spent electing a President in 1952?

A—About $18 million was spent in the Presidential contest, according to a Congressional Quarterly survey of reports filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives. Approximately another $5 million was reported spent in the Congressional races.

Q—Who spent more in the 1952 elections? The Republicans or the Democrats?

A—The CQ tabulation showed Republicans reported spending about $13.6 million, while Democrats said their campaign cost about $6.2 million. Another $3 million was spent by labor groups, minor parties and unaffiliated political groups.

"I REMEMBER"

From Mrs. E. H. Hunter,ville, Arkansas: I remember September, 1901, when Mr. McKinley was assassinated. At the time I was a teacher in a remote, wooded district of Ohio. The school term was weeks between laying by all other crops and picking fall crops. Pay for the term was $3 board.

The box-built schoolhouse room had two doors—one for boys and the other for the girls. The windows with wooden frames, long homemade benches, small blackboards, a few desks, a water pail and a spring were supplied by a water. The boys played outside of the house and the girls, never together.

The twenty pupils ranged from six to 16 and from their own books, slates and pencils which they used from year to year. All brought dinner buckets with lids and usually consisted of soda biscuits, fried eggs. Some children were two miles. Two children were same dresses, washed and over the weekend, every day term.

The post office was three through the woods. Only newspapers reached the county. The county seat was 19 away.

On Saturday of the week of Mr. McKinley's death, the ly where I boarded and I left in their big wagon and we spend the day with neighbors. Here I first saw accounts of tragedy in the weekly newspaper. When I began talking of the landlady said, "Yes, we had something about it, but I thought to mention it."

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLDTIMERS

From Mrs. E. H. Hunter, Boonville, Arkansas: I remember in September, 1901, when President McKinley was assassinated.

At the time I was a teacher in a remote, wooded district of Alabama. The school term was six weeks between laying by of summer crops and picking fall cotton. Pay for the term was $30 and board.

The box-built schoolhouse of one room had two doors—one for the boys and the other for the girls. Three windows with wooden shutters, long home-made benches, a small blackboard, a few pieces of chalk, a water pail and dipper. Water was supplied by a nearby spring. The boys played on one side of the house and the girls the other, never together.

The twenty pupils ranged in ages from six to 19 and furnished their own books, slates and pencils which they used from year to year. All brought dinner in the buckets with lids and usually consisted of soda biscuits, fried meat and eggs. Some children walked two miles. Two children were the same dresses, washed and ironed over the weekend, every day of the term.

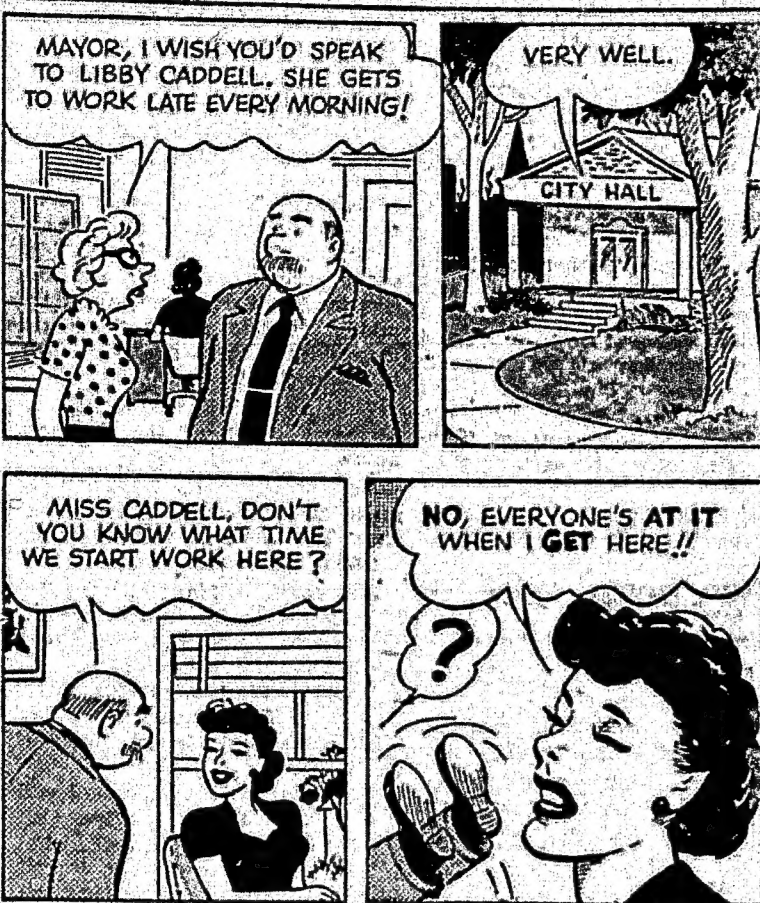

The post office was three miles through the woods. Only weekly newspapers reached the community. The county seat was 19 miles away.

TODAY'S Meditation

from The Upper Room
THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

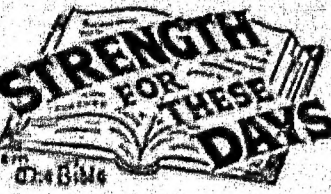

Thursday, November 5
Though our outward plan perhaps, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. (II Corinthians 4:16). Head II Corinthians 4:17 through 5:1.

A FRIEND asked John Quincy Adams how he felt on his 60th birthday. "I thank you," was the ex-President's reply. "John Quincy Adams is well, but the house in which he lives at present is dilapidated. Time and seasons have nearly destroyed it.... I think John Quincy Adams will have to move out soon. But he himself is quite well, quite well." God has set time limits in our bodies but He has set eternity in our souls. If we live after this flesh, we share the limitations that are inseparable from these human natures of ours. But if our true life is in God, in spiritual companionship with Christ, we are secure no matter what happens. The wear and tear of life do not defeat us because His grace builds us up in strength every day. Verily He restoreth our souls.

Prayer
Our Father, help us this day to live as children of God and not as children of this world. Then knowest that we love life, but teach us to love Thee much more. Through Thy grace continue to restore our souls. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Thought For the Day
"Of what use is eternity to a man who does not know how to use half an hour?"—R. W. Emerson.

—Paul B. Kern (North Carolina)

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS

My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go; my heart shall not retract me so long as I live.—Job 27:6.

The man who refuses or neglects to live righteously may feel himself and others some of the time—but he cannot for a moment fool his conscience which is forever within him, to speak in the still of the night. He who lives within God, however, lives without fear.

A simple, mindless way of killing chickens is recommended by Dr. Jerry Brummett, Maine Extension Service animal pathologist. He has been demonstrating it at poultry health clinics in the Pine Tree State.

MAINE BEAVER REPORT READY SOON
A new report, the final results of the Maine beaver study conducted by the Game Division of the Fish and Game Department, is now in the last stages of preparation and should be off the press shortly.

The report is the compilation of several years of work by game biologists Kenneth W. Hodgdon and John Hunt. It covers the life history and management of beaver in Maine, their population and distribution, parasites and diseases, as well as the history and economic importance of the animal in the State.

Approximately 100 pages in length, the report is illustrated with thirty pictures and 14 graphs. Two thousand copies will be printed.

Maine school children need more vitamin C and carotene in their diets, says Dr. Mary Clayton, biologist for the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station. Many common fruits and vegetables carry vitamin C or carotene. A list of such foods may be obtained free from Dr. Clayton at Orono.

SPORTS FLASHES

from The Sporting News by J. G. Taylor Spink

Lakers Picked to Win Basketball Crown

The tall and talented Minneapolis Lakers were once more favored to sweep all honors when the National Basketball Association opened its 324-game schedule on October 30, writes Ben Gould in The Sporting News.

President Maurice Podoloff is confident that the NBA will surpass last season's attendance, which showed a 19 percent increase over the gate of the previous campaign. Podoloff listed five reasons:

1. Most of the teams have been strengthened by stars returning from the armed forces.
2. The weaker squads have been bolstered by the addition of the standout Indianapolis cagers, distributed around the circuit.
3. Milwaukee and Baltimore, riding on the wave of major league baseball hysteria, are confident that the pro cagers will also cash in.
4. Nationally televised games every Saturday, starting December 12, are expected to heighten interest.
5. The changes in rules, limiting the front court to 40 feet from the end line and penalizing all rear court fouls with two free throws, were expected to eliminate frequent fouling and speed up the game.

According to The Sporting News, the Lakers' biggest threat stems from Fort Wayne. Other teams in the league are: Milwaukee, Rochester, New York, Boston, Syracuse, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Pierall Makes Third Base Coaching Easy

Jimmy Pierall of the Red Sox has made third base coaching a soft touch, claims the hot corner signal waver of the Athletics, Tom Oliver.

The Sporting News quotes Tom as saying: "When you're playing the Red Sox, there's one thing that's automatic when you're coaching at third base. You just put up a red light for your baserunners. You don't run on Pierall unless you want to catch an early train."

Upsets Taking Forecasters To The Hills

Football forecasters are "taking to the hills" in record-breaking numbers. The 1953 grid campaign likely will go into the books as the "Year of the Great Upsets," says The Sporting News.

A veteran midwest coach, who is one of the game's finest students of gridiron trends and developments, puts it this way:

"The basic reason for the frequent upsets," he claims, "is the return of one-plateau play with the limited substitution rule. The change in the rule has reduced sharply the 'spread' in the playing potential of the major collegiate teams. No longer is extreme depth and a bench load of specialists a vital factor. Football now is back to a point where a squad of about 22 gridlers carries the bulk of the playing load."

Golden Text: "As by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." (Romans 5:18).

A Sporting News "Brain Teaser"

Since the "brain teaser" on what player was lifted for a black-bitten on his second trip to the plate in a World's Series, after hitting a home run on his first attempt (George Shube, 1933) caused so much comment—this newspaper offers another: "What city has had teams in both the American and National Leagues—but never both at the same time?"

Readers of the Citizen sending in the correct answer on a postcard, postmarked not later than November 14, to The Sporting News, 2018 Washington Ave., St. Louis 8, Mo., will be mailed a copy of the latest issue of the baseball weekly.

Four periods will be run when the teachers of various subjects will be present in their rooms to demonstrate some of the work taken up in the classes and to confer with parents.

GOULD TAKES WILTON, 23-7

The Huskies looked their best last Saturday as they defeated Wilton 23-7. Penalties and second half fumbles kept the score from mounting even higher. One 54-yard touchdown play, which was a pass, Burnham to Murphy, was called back because of a holding penalty.

With one game remaining and Gould still unbeaten in Maine, much interest is centered on the final game of the season at Fryeburg Academy this Saturday. The defensive line played so considerable improvement and the backs were all gaining yardage. Burnham especially played his best game, as the visiting Eagles had plenty of trouble stopping him. The passing also showed improvement with 6 completed for 90 yards out of 10 attempts.

Gould scored twice in the first period as Rowe scampered 12 yards to score and Adams bucked the line from the two yard line for the second T. D. Again in the second period, Rowe raced 9 yards to pay dirt. Adams made 2 placekicks conversions good to make the score 20-0 at half time.

Fumbles kept Gould from scoring further.

Members of the Academy Outing Club have elected the following officers for 1953-1954: President, Mary Anne Myers, Bethel; Vice President, Robert Blake, Bethel; Secretary-Treasurer, Nancy Carver, Bethel.

Dr. John Trinward, local dentist, addressed the student body on Wednesday morning on the subject of "Dentistry as a Vocation." Dr. Trinward prefaced his remarks by stating that of all the learned professions, there is none that has undergone such marked changes during recent years as has dentistry.

In the early days, dental surgery consisted mainly of the extraction of teeth and the making of plates to replace them and the profession was quite independent of medicine. Its major interests were directed primarily toward the mechanical and technical procedures involved in dental restorations. Not many years ago, it was discovered that many diseases of the teeth are directly related to the general health of the people. A variety of disturbances of the heart, kidney, blood, skin, joints and other parts of the body, which formerly were thought to be specific diseases of the parts, were shown to be the result of infections originating in diseased teeth. This newer conception completely revolutionized modern dental theory and practice and has affected a very close affiliation of the medical and dental professions. Accordingly, a dental education has acquired the same broad academic training and high scholastic attainments as in medicine and other learned professions.

At the present time, the formal training for the profession is based on at least two years pre-dental work composed of science courses and cultural subjects. This is followed by the dental curriculum which is now four years in length, including training in practically all the basic medical science upon which is built a consideration of the specific diseases of the mouth and the teeth and the therapeutic and operative measures employed in their treatment. By this increased educational standard and intellectual achievement dentistry has achieved a true professional status.

Dr. Trinward emphasized honesty and integrity of primary importance in the qualifications of any dental candidate. Like physicians, dentists are public health servants in whom patients can trust their health, their comfort, and even their lives. The responsibilities are heavy and require the exercise of keen judgment and unremitting effort. The dentist, like the physician, must keep his own counsel and in his practice he will be entrusted with many confidences of his patients which he should not violate. Dr. Trinward mentioned further that a dentist must possess good health, a pleasing personality, and mechanical and technical skill.

The profession offers, to the well-prepared and diligent graduate, as great an opportunity for success as almost any other profession. The young graduate can set himself up in practice and build himself up a clientele of patients very promptly. Success depends very largely upon himself. No one should, however, elect the study of dentistry in the belief that it is an easy road to financial success but the attraction should come from a desire to be of service and to engage in a life work of value to a society. Dr. Trinward pointed out that dentistry, like any other type of work, offers certain advantages. Namely, the satisfaction of knowing that his services are needed and are of value to people whom he serves, that he is independent in that he deals with the people directly, thus eliminating any domination in the pursuit of his profession, and further, that he becomes established in the community as a respected citizen and is usually looked upon as a leader because of his training and education. In addition, practically all the work of a dentist is done in his office during office hours and his habits of life may, therefore, be regular. However, as in all types of work, the profession also presents some disadvantages in that it requires the practitioner to remain indoors or in the laboratory for long hours. It is a strenuous life in which there must be close and constant attention to fine details and there are often arduous tasks in performing operations on patients for many hours each day. Dr. Trinward explained the cost of pre-dental and dental education is high, but that money should prove no obstacle for the well qualified applicant. The number of applicants in relation to the facilities available in the 42 dental schools of the country makes competition exceedingly keen. The need for qualified graduates is especially great in all fields—general practitioners, public health services, dental clinics, public institutions, industrial plants, and all branches of the armed forces.

Dr. Trinward closed his remarks by stating that there are excellent opportunities for girls in the profession of dentistry, especially in children's work, public health work, and public education. Girls should also consider training for dental technicians, dental hygienists, and dental assistants.

Dr. John Trinward, local dentist, addressed the student body on Wednesday morning on the subject of "Dentistry as a Vocation." Dr. Trinward prefaced his remarks by stating that of all the learned professions, there is none that has undergone such marked changes during recent years as has dentistry.

In the early days, dental surgery consisted mainly of the extraction of teeth and the making of plates to replace them and the profession was quite independent of medicine. Its major interests were directed primarily toward the mechanical and technical procedures involved in dental restorations. Not many years ago, it was discovered that many diseases of the teeth are directly related to the general health of the people. A variety of disturbances of the heart, kidney, blood, skin, joints and other parts of the body, which formerly were thought to be specific diseases of the parts, were shown to be the result of infections originating in diseased teeth. This newer conception completely revolutionized modern dental theory and practice and has affected a very close affiliation of the medical and dental professions. Accordingly, a dental education has acquired the same broad academic training and high scholastic attainments as in medicine and other learned professions.

At the present time, the formal training for the profession is based on at least two years pre-dental work composed of science courses and cultural subjects. This is followed by the dental curriculum which is now four years in length, including training in practically all the basic medical science upon which is built a consideration of the specific diseases of the mouth and the teeth and the therapeutic and operative measures employed in their treatment. By this increased educational standard and intellectual achievement dentistry has achieved a true professional status.

Dr. Trinward emphasized honesty and integrity of primary importance in the qualifications of any dental candidate. Like physicians, dentists are public health servants in whom patients can trust their health, their comfort, and even their lives. The responsibilities are heavy and require the exercise of keen judgment and unremitting effort. The dentist, like the physician, must keep his own counsel and in his practice he will be entrusted with many confidences of his patients which he should not violate. Dr. Trinward mentioned further that a dentist must possess good health, a pleasing personality, and mechanical and technical skill.

The profession offers, to the well-prepared and diligent graduate, as great an opportunity for success as almost any other profession. The young graduate can set himself up in practice and build himself up a clientele of patients very promptly. Success depends very largely upon himself. No one should, however, elect the study of dentistry in the belief that it is an easy road to financial success but the attraction should come from a desire to be of service and to engage in a life work of value to a society. Dr. Trinward pointed out that dentistry, like any other type of work, offers certain advantages. Namely, the satisfaction of knowing that his services are needed and are of value to people whom he serves, that he is independent in that he deals with the people directly, thus eliminating any domination in the pursuit of his profession, and further, that he becomes established in the community as a respected citizen and is usually looked upon as a leader because of his training and education. In addition, practically all the work of a dentist is done in his office during office hours and his habits of life may, therefore, be regular. However, as in all types of work, the profession also presents some disadvantages in that it requires the practitioner to remain indoors or in the laboratory for long hours. It is a strenuous life in which there must be close and constant attention to fine details and there are often arduous tasks in performing operations on patients for many hours each day. Dr. Trinward explained the cost of pre-dental and dental education is high, but that money should prove no obstacle for the well qualified applicant. The number of applicants in relation to the facilities available in the 42 dental schools of the country makes competition exceedingly keen. The need for qualified graduates is especially great in all fields—general practitioners, public health services, dental clinics, public institutions, industrial plants, and all branches of the armed forces.

Dr. Trinward closed his remarks by stating that there are excellent opportunities for girls in the profession of dentistry, especially in children's work, public health work, and public education. Girls should also consider training for dental technicians, dental hygienists, and dental assistants.
